B Aggregate expenditures by Major Commodity Groups	60

Explanatory Note

The attached data cover foreign exchange expenditures by African countries for certain major commodity groups. It does not include the cost of imported services and non-productive/low capacity utilization projects for which information was not readily available. The data have been reproduced for 1982 and 1983 and are aggregated for each African country as well as for major commodity groups. It is summarized in Tables I and II.

The data have been compiled on the basis of information published by the United Nations largely obtained from world exports to African countries. Very little information is available from the African countries themselves. For 1982, for example, only 15 African countries provided information on their trade statistics, while in 1983 only 3 African countries provided such information. Furthermore, no information was available at all for the following countries: Botswana, Djibouti, Equatorial Guinea, Lesotho, Rwanda, Sao Tomé and Principe, Swaziland and Zimbabwe. Furthermore, information on intra-African trade has not been taken into consideration.

These above factors coupled with the absence of expenditures on imported services as well as on capital flows into unproductive and low capacity utilization projects in Africa mean that the figures presented in this document are underestimated. Nevertheless, the data do show clearly that foreign exchange expenditures by African countries on major industrial commodity groups represented a significant portion of their foreign exchange expenditures. For comparative purposes these expenditures represent 55% of Africa's external debt during 1982 which, on the basis of information published by the World Bank, amounted to $134.4 billion during that year. Even more striking, it shows the external dependence of African countries on industrial raw and intermediate materials required for the realization of not only industrial projects but also other economic development programmes. Furthermore it shows the very high ratios in the African countries of imports to apparent consumption in many classes of manufactures.
